International application No.

PCT/JP2004/013813

Box No. V

Reasoned statement under Article 35(2) with regard to novelty, inventive step or industrial applicability;
citations and explanations supporting such statement

Document 6: JP 2001-327394 A (Soken Kabushiki Kaisha), 27
November 2001, claims 1 and 5; paragraph [0009]; and all drawings (Family: none)

The inventions set forth in claims 1, 2, 5 and 8 do not involve an inventive step in the light of document 1, which is cited in the international search report, document 2 or 3, both of which are cited in the international search report, and document 6, which is newly cited in the international preliminary examination report.

In the invention disclosed in document 1, it is apparent that the "eyelets (16)," which are "hook insertion holes," are formed so as to be orthogonal to the lengthwise direction of the curtain rail, and it is also apparent that said eyelets have a width which is sufficient to allow the passage of a hook.

In addition, it would have been easy for a person skilled in the art to conceive of applying the curtain runner that is disclosed in document 2 or document 3 as the curtain runner for the curtain that is disclosed in document 1.

Furthermore, the feature of configuring so that the hook insertion holes and the body parts of the hook members have approximately the same width in the lengthwise direction and the feature of providing pin parts that protrude upwards from the body part of each hook member are merely simple design matters that could have been configured by a person skilled in the art, as appropriate.

Hypothetically, even if the "hook insertion holes" of the invention set forth in claim 1 were both orthogonal to the lengthwise direction of the curtain rail and parallel to the plane of the curtain, document 6 discloses a configuration wherein the "hook insertion holes" are formed so as to be both orthogonal to the lengthwise direction of the curtain rail and parallel to the plane of the curtain.

The invention set forth in claim 3 does not involve an inventive step in the light of documents 1 to 3 and 6, which are indicated above, and documents 4 and 5, which are cited in the international search report. It would have been easy for a person skilled in the art to conceive of applying the technical feature that is disclosed in document 4, wherein the leg part of the curtain hook is narrower than the body part of the curtain hook, and the technical feature that is disclosed in document 5, wherein a notch is provided in the section of the body part that faces the leg part, in the curtain hooks that are disclosed in document 1.

The invention set forth in claim 4 does not involve an inventive step in the light of documents 1 to 6. It would have been easy for a person skilled in the art to conceive of applying the technical feature that is disclosed in document 3, wherein a protrusion is provided to the curtain hook, in the curtain hooks that are disclosed in document 1. At that time, the question of whether to provide the protrusion to the body part of the hook member or to provide the protrusion to the leg part of the hook member is merely a design issue that could have been resolved by a person skilled in the art, as appropriate.

The inventions set forth in claims 6 and 7 are not disclosed in any of documents 1 to 6, and would not have been obvious to a person skilled in the art.
